A Great Gift: Words of gratitude are due to Joe and Marion Mooney, Terry Daly, Jeanne Dennis, and Deb Journalist for their many efforts to plan and conduct yet another successful CTK Charitable Golf Tournament and to Willowbend Country Club for their fine hospitality on September 12th.

All participants can be very proud of the fact that the funds raised through this annual event are being devoted to charity. A gift of $25,000 from proceeds of the Golf Tournament was presented for use by the CTK Resources and Financial Assistance Ministry, designated for housing needs especially for those who are being displaced from long-term rentals in the current real estate market and often need help with some portion of the first, last and security deposits required in order to relocate.

Those who turn to the parish for such assistance will be able to be better helped thanks to all who were part of this enjoyable, effective and much needed annual fund raiser for charity.

Light in Darkness: As the anniversary of 9/11, the infamous day of terrorist attacks was observed this year, there was a documentary aired on one of the cable networks that focused on the story of what happened to commercial airliners and their passengers that were grounded on that day when it was realized that high-jacked planes were being used as weapons.

Distribution of Holy Communion 11:45 AM - 1:00 PM EVERY SUNDAY

The special focused on the town of Gander, in Newfoundland, a town of less than 10,000 residents, but one which because of its strategic location on the North Atlantic coast had an extensive airstrip dating back to the Second World War. It was there that some 38 airliners being diverted in-flight from scheduled landings in the United States were instructed to land until further notice.

At first, some 7,000 passengers and crew were kept on the planes on the tarmac, but as the situation unfolded in New York, Washington and Pennsylvania that day, it became clear that these flights were not going to be taking off anytime soon, and so conditions on the airliners were becoming quite uncomfortable.

The population of Gander and other surrounding towns were nearly doubled when all the passengers and crew were eventually taken off the planes.

What do you do when some 7,000 unexpected guests arrive? Amazingly, the people of this region sprang into action to provide hospitality by making sure there would be shelter at various public buildings, churches, community halls and private homes, and food was prepared around the clock, not professionally catered food mainly, but homemade!

Sleeping bags and cots were gathered from homes and disaster relief centers in the general area; people lent or gave clothing, provided transportation to stores and pharmacies; and organized recreation and entertainment. One woman resident of Gander who was interviewed said: "I knew that they were fortunate to be stranded here, because surely we would look after them."

That they did and then some as they worked day and night to provide for their guests and even formed enduring bonds of friendship with the "plane people" as the Newfoundlanders came to call their guests.

The remembrance of this quite unusual experience and amazing display of human kindness and hospitality is preserved in a popular musical theatre production entitled "Come From Away" which has won several Tony awards on Broadway.

Yet what the television documentary clearly shows is that the people of Gander rose to the overwhelming challenge they were quite unexpectedly presented because of a spirit of community and care that already existed among them.

Indeed neighborly care and concern in action was what they were already well practiced at showing one another especially in times of sadness or hardship.

Thus when 7,000 strangers got stranded in their midst they just did more of it all at the same time to be sure that their unexpected guests would be welcomed and made as comfortable as possible and be well fed and entertained during their time there.

When the flights resumed a few days later, sincere bonds of friendship had formed and there were genuine tears shed as guests and hosts bid farewell to one another.

Certainly, many terrible things happen in our world on account of the forces of darkness that can invade and permeate human minds and hearts and these events often grab the headlines.

Yet, we should be certain that even though we do not necessarily hear of the good as much as we do the bad, that in the midst of any darkness there is usually light shining from minds and hearts imbued with the Holy Spirit of God.

The story of Gander and its neighboring towns is thankfully being made known through a Broadway musical and a television documentary, revealing one fine example of that divine light and goodness which should both inspire us to be hopeful and encourage us to also be sources of light, agents of God's goodness, in the world's darkness that can cast its shadows even our own small corner of this world.
